Here at Fort Valley State University, The Center for Teaching and Learning helps faculty and staff to share their most up to date knowledge and research experiences with colleagues campus wide. Spring 2016 semester the Center held a few different workshops which gave faculty and staff the opportunity to learn more about Strategies for navigating Promotion and Tenure process here at FVSU by Dr. Archie Williams, Using a Video Lecture Capture System to enhance student performances presented by Dr. Ian Toppin, the Use of Smartboard to enhance instruction by the OIT, Strategies for engaging 1st generation students with Dr. Davida Curtis, and Building and Sustaining a strong research agenda with Dr. Komanduri Murty. Presentations were held in the Center for Teaching and Learning, located on the 3rd floor of Hunt Memorial Library room 303.

CTL

The CTL blog is a great way for faculty to share their professional activities with each other. Currently, faculty are invited to share their experiences in the following areas:

- Conferences or workshops recently attended
- Summary of books of interest
- On, or off-campus service activities
- Current research, grants, or publications

We look forward to reading your blog at:

VIDEO LECTURE CAPTURE

Faculty are beginning to increase their usage of Panopto, which is our video lecture capture system for recording lecture content so that students can have access beyond the classroom. Here are a few reasons why those who are not yet using Panopto may want to consider doing so:

- It's easy to use
- It’s a great way to flip the classroom so that in-class time can be spent helping students understand lecture content.
- Remediation can be done separate from regular class time
- Can be used for supplemental instruction

CLASSROOM OBSERVATIONS

The Center for Teaching and Learning would like to help you with your professionalism in the classroom. Please let us know if you would like us to do a video recorded observation in your classroom. We will provide you with a video and rubric with our feedback and suggestions. Contact us if you are interested and/or receive more information.
